Results of Home Visiting Environmental Scan 2015 Snapshot

September 20, 2016

Key Findings

- 5,220 families and 6,280 children ages birth to five years of age received home visiting services in Alabama in 2015
- 56 of Alabama's 67 counties have home visiting services available; however, wide variability exists in numbers of children and families served within each county
- 14 different home visiting service delivery models are used in Alabama; most children and families receive home visiting through Parents as Teachers (PAT) or Home Instruction for Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPY)
- The majority of Alabama children and families receives home visiting services through a model deemed effective and evidence-based by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services
- Most home visiting services in Alabama are funded through federal dollars, followed by Education Trust Fund allocations
- To a lesser extent, home visiting is funded through private, community, and corporate foundation donations
- Most home visiting programs in Alabama are funded and administered by the Alabama Department of Early Childhood Education followed by the Alabama Department of Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention
- Most agencies that provide voluntary home visiting services report being full to capacity. The need for home visiting services frequently far outstrips their ability to provide these services, leaving children and families on waiting lists in many communities

Background

In May, 2016, Alabama received a grant from The Alliance for Early Success to explore Home Visiting advocacy in our state. To support this effort, the grant team has planned a multi-phase environmental scan to support understanding of the current home visiting system in the state, including the number of children and families served, who provides home visiting services, what counties have access to home visiting, the service delivery models of home visiting used in the state, and funding sources of home visiting services. This project was completed through a partnership between the Alabama Partnership for Children (APC), the Alabama Department of Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention (ADCANP), the Alabama Department of Early Childhood Education (ADECE), and the University of Alabama at Birmingham School of Public Health (UAB-SOPH), Department of Health Care Organization and Policy. This report was prepared by Drs. Julie Preskitt, Matt Fifolt, Wei Su, and Ms. Beth Johns the UAB School of Public Health. Ms. Gail Piggott (APC), Dr. Tracye Strichik (ADECE), and Ms. Sallye Longshore (ADCANP) provided oversight and guidance for the process and report.

For purposes of this project, “Home Visiting” was defined as follows:

...an evidence-based program that includes home visiting as a primary service delivery strategy (excluding programs with infrequent or supplemental home visiting), and is offered on a voluntary basis to expectant families, and families of children birth through kindergarten targeting participant outcomes which include improved maternal and child health, prevention of child injuries, child abuse, or maltreatment, and reduction of emergency department visits, improvement in school readiness and achievement, reduction in crime or domestic violence, improvements in family economic self-sufficiency, and improvements in the coordination and referrals for other community resources and supports.

Methods

The existing Alabama Home Visiting Advisory Board provided input regarding the content and process to complete the environmental scan. This Board met in June, July, and August 2016 to provide guidance, review preliminary results, and discuss next steps. The final version of the report was presented to the Board during the September 2016 meeting.

Phase I of the Home Visiting Environmental Scan included a survey to agencies that provide home visiting and subsequent follow-up interviews to confirm responses. Potential respondent contacts and agencies were identified from lists provided by the major funders of home visiting in the state (ADECE and ADCANP), lists from national sources related to the major service delivery models provided in the state, and the expert knowledge of Advisory Board members.

With guidance regarding content by the Advisory Board, an electronic survey was created using Qualtrics software. In addition to the survey link, potential respondents were sent an explanatory email about the project and a step-by-step instruction sheet with screen shots to assist them gather the information needed to complete the survey and to support consistency of interpretation of the questions. A site-level report was created based on each response and follow-up interviews were conducted as needed and to the extent possible to verify the accuracy of responses.

Respondents were requested to provide information based on their most recent annual report. Given that each site may have different fiscal cycles, the time periods covered differed, for consistency, we describe these results as a 2015 “snapshot.” The major funders for home visiting, ADECE and ADCANP, provided numbers of children and families served by their program sites that did not complete the electronic survey.

UAB completed follow-up interviews with 30 program sites to further probe survey responses and to ask additional questions that have arisen during Advisory Board discussions. Results from sites and interviews are presented below.

Results

Respondents

A total of 55 program sites either completed the electronic survey or had partial data provided on their behalf by a funder. These respondents work in sites in 56 different counties, and each site may serve one or more counties throughout the state. See Appendix A for a complete listing of program sites/agencies included in the 2015 snapshot.

Reach and Numbers Served

According to the most recently-submitted annual reports, a total of 5,220 families and 6,280 children ages birth to five years of age received home visiting services statewide.

According to U.S. Census Bureau estimates, Alabama's population is 4,858,979. Of that estimate, 6% – or 291,539 – are children under 5 years of age.<sup>1</sup>

Further, the most recent estimates suggest that 30.6% – or 89,211 children under age 5 are living in poverty in the state.

Given these estimates and the number served reported in the 2015 snapshot, the Alabama Home Visiting System served approximately 7.0% of all children ages birth to 5 years who live in poverty. Though home visiting models have flexibility to focus on a variety of risk factors, families living in poverty are a fairly common group recruited to participate in home visiting services.

Home visiting services are available in 56 of Alabama's 67 counties (84%), though the numbers of children and families served vary greatly by county. Figure 1 provides a graphic view of home visiting program site/agency locations in the state. See Appendix B and Appendix C for a list of counties with and without access to home visiting services based on the 2015 snapshot report. Figure 2 presents a county-level overview of home visiting service access. The figure is intended to show access at any capacity and does not include any reference to numbers served by county. See Appendix D for a more detailed table of the numbers of children and families served by county. Based on the number of children age 5 and under living in poverty in the county, a percentage of potentially-eligible children served is presented for each county. The percent served ranges from none (counties with

Service Delivery Models

Home visiting services in Alabama are delivered using 14 different service delivery models, with a small number of respondents indicating they do not use a specific model. Respondents were provided a list of national service delivery models rated as effective by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) according to criteria for an evidence-based early childhood HV service delivery model.<sup>3</sup> If the responding program implements a model other than one provided on the list, respondents could use an open-ended selection to provide the name of the model. Table 1 provides a brief description of national, evidence-based models implemented in Alabama and a listing of other models used by specific sites. See Appendix E for a detailed table of home visiting service delivery models implemented in each county, along with the agencies that provide services and associated funding sources.

Home Visiting Service Delivery Models Implemented in Alabama, 2015 Snapshot Report

Service Delivery Model	Description
Early Head Start - Home-Based Option	Community-based program for low-income families with pregnant women, infants, and toddlers up to age 3; promotes parental development and a stimulating home environment
Healthy Families America (HFA)	Promotes positive parenting to prevent child abuse and neglect and support child well-being; focuses on pregnant women and parents of children from birth to 5 years old
Home Instruction for Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPOY)	Peer parent educators partner with parents to prepare children for success in school, particularly those most at risk because of poverty, limited education and English proficiency; focuses on children ages 3-5 years old
Nurse Family Partnership (NFP)	Nurses support first-time, low income pregnant women from pregnancy to child's age 2 years to support healthy pregnancies, knowledgeable and competent parents, and improved economic self-sufficiency to provide babies with the best possible start in life
Parents as Teachers (PAT)	Promotes optimal early development, learning, and health of children by supporting and engaging their parents and caregivers; focuses on pregnant women and parents of children from birth to 5 years old
Other Models Active Parenting Now Baby Talk Home Builders Intensive In Home Intervention (FIND Model) Parent Aid Model Parenting Counts Parenting Stress Index &amp; individualized goal plan Partners for a Healthy Baby The Creative Curriculum – (home-based program)	Further discussion with individual sites is required to describe these other models

Most children and families in Alabama are served through the Parents as Teachers (PAT) – 41% of families and 43% of children – and Home Instruction for Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPY) – 35% of families and 32% of children. Figures 3 and 4 display a breakdown of home visiting services by service delivery model for families and children, respectively.

The majority of families and children (86% and 84%, respectively) receive home visiting services through a service delivery model that has been rated effective by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) according to criteria for an evidence-based early childhood HV service delivery model.<sup>3</sup> These service delivery models were listed by name in the survey and described in Table 1. Almost all others receive service through some type of formally-defined model. Figures 5 and 6 display service receipt through evidence-based delivery models for families and children, respectively.

Funding Sources

The largest percentage of home visiting services in Alabama are funded through federal dollars – either through the Maternal, Infant, Early Childhood Home Visiting Program (MIECHV) or other federal funds, including Head Start/Early Head Start, Healthy Start, Title I, and Safe and Stable Families. MIECHV funds, administered by ADECE, comprise 33% of all home visiting services both for families and children. State funds from the Education Trust Fund (ETF) and administered by ADECE provide for the second largest percentages of home visiting services for families and children, at 27% and 25%, respectively. Support from the Children’s Trust Fund, administered by ADCANP, provides for the third largest percentages of home visiting services for families and children, at 17% and 20%, respectively. Private, community, or corporate foundation donations support 3% of families and children to receive home visiting services. Respondents also reported receiving other state and local funds to provide home visiting services, including support from Alabama Medicaid, the Alabama Department of Human Resources, and the Alabama Department of Mental Health. Figures 7 and 8 display a statewide breakdown of funding sources for home visiting services for families and children, respectively. See Appendix E for a detailed table of funding sources for home visiting in each county, along with a listing of agencies that provide services and the service delivery models implemented.

Follow-up Interviews

Follow-up interviews were conducted with survey respondents to clarify their initial responses and also to further probe their capacity to serve, the existence of waiting lists, and the number of additional families and children they might serve in their communities if they had more funding. Of the 55 responses to the initial survey (direct respondents and numbers added by funders for non-responding sites), 30 interviews were completed. This section provides analyses of themes that emerged from the interviews.

- Sites Are Full to Capacity: Almost all site representatives interviewed (93.3%, 28 of 30) said that they were able to fill all of the slots they currently had for home visiting services for families and children. Despite occasional lulls during staff changes, typically all slots available through current funding levels are full.
- Many Sites Have Waiting Lists: Representatives from 21 of the 30 sites (70%) said they typically have a waiting list for home visiting services. This means that there are additional families in the community that voluntarily seek home visiting services, but are unable to receive them as the site does not have the funding to serve them. The typical waiting list numbers range from two to three to as many as 45, with an average waiting list of 18 families. Representatives from four of the sites that indicated that they did not have a waiting list explained that this lack of a waiting list was not due to lack of need, but rather to creative ways they had found to serve additional families. In reality, they had exceeded their funded number of slots.

- Additional Funding Could Reduce Unmet Need for Home Visiting Services: Nearly all sites reported that, based on their understanding of the needs in their communities, they could serve additional families if they received more funding. The range of additional families that could be served ranged from 15 to 500, depending upon the site; the average number of additional families that could be served was 56. This means that, on average, 56 more families in each community could receive home visiting services if additional funding were provided.

Conclusions

Voluntary home visiting services in Alabama are provided through a diverse delivery system of community-based agencies. Home visiting is available fairly broadly across the state, yet gaps exist and, in most places, the need outstrips the ability to provide, leaving children and families on waiting lists. The vast majority of home visiting services are provided according to an evidence-based model recognized as effective by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, meaning that the state is developing a high quality home visiting system. The most common models in the state are Parents and Teachers (PAT) and Home Instruction of Parents of Preschool Youngsters (HIPPI). The majority of home visiting services in the state are supported by the federal Maternal, Infant, Early Childhood Home Visiting Program (MIECHV), Education Trust Fund dollars administered by the Alabama Department of Early Childhood Education, and the Children's Trust Fund (administered by the Alabama Department of Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention). Opportunities exist for increasing the capacity and reach of the home visiting system through additional funding to increase access to high quality, evidence-based services for vulnerable children and families in Alabama.

Next Steps

Phase II of this environmental scan will include:

- Adding all program sites/agencies to an interactive map currently hosted on the ADECE website to show sites, contact information, counties served, and numbers for each county
- Creating a static map of numbers served by state and county overlaid with children ages 0-5 years who live in poverty (U.S. Census Data)

Limitations

This home visiting environmental scan is an ambitious project that has provided critical information about the system of home visiting in Alabama. It represents an initial look at capacity, organization, and funding at levels that have been previously unavailable. Despite essential contributions to awareness, knowledge, and advocacy, this report does have some important limitations that should be considered. First, the home visiting system in Alabama is complex, involving many community agencies and a variety of funding streams. This report is only as complete as the responses received or for whom data were available through a central funder. Despite exhaustive efforts to create a comprehensive list of potential respondents, it is possible that some program sites could have been omitted from the request to complete the survey if they were not on any of the lists used to develop the respondent pool and/or if they were unknown to Home Visiting Advisory Board members. We consider this report a 2015 snapshot and expect that once it becomes publically available, the broader community will assist in identifying additional sites that provide home visiting as a primary means of delivering services to children and families but were inadvertently omitted from the initial respondent pool. Further, despite instructions that clarified the funding stream question and follow-up interviews, it was difficult for some sites to identify the numbers of children and families served with each funding stream if they blended or braided dollars from multiple local sources to support their program. Multiple funding streams and exact budget amounts may need further clarification with funders and grant administrators.

Currently, it is difficult to determine an exact response rate to the initial survey. We know who responded, but in some cases the person who received the initial request to participate may have delegated responsibility to another staff member or multiple staff members. All responses were combined and any potential discrepancies were verified by programs to eliminate duplication, yet the complexity of the system, with the potential for delegated and/or multiple respondents prevented a calculation of a response rate.

Some sites registered incomplete reporting data as they did not participate in the initial survey. UAB was able to verify data for some non-responders through the funding agent in terms of numbers served through their specific funding source, but values could be an underestimate or incomplete picture if the site also served additional children with other funding types.
